Joint Committee Approved With 2 Major Amendments

by Jon Higman
Hatchet Staff Writer

THE UNIVERSITY Senate gave its approval Friday to the creation of a joint committee between it and the Student Assembly. The Senate-passed resolution was so amended, however, that Student Assembly leaders doubt if it will be approved by that group.

The resolution would abolish the student-faculty Student Life Committee, which for 37 years served as a direct line of communication between the student government and the University President.

The resolution would also abolish the Senate's Standing Committee on Student Relationships, with the "responsibilities and purposes" of that committee being transferred to the new body. The Relationships Committee, which is currently considering the Statement of Student Rights and Responsibilities reports to the Senate on non-academic matters of concern to students.

In addition to its other functions, the Joint Committee would "serve both the University Senate and the Student Assembly by studying any matters or resolutions referred to it" by either body, sending back recommendations and reports to both groups.

The "general charge to the committee," as set forth in the resolution, is to "facilitate all efforts to improve student-faculty relations; encourage student recommendations in all areas of Senate policy-formulation which affect student life, and recommend changes in 'The Rules and Regulations Governing the Conduct of Student Life.'"

The manner in which the committee could make its recommendations was the subject of considerable debate on the Senate floor. The draft, which went to it for debate provided that "in matters which the committee may decide are of import to the entire University Community, it shall make its recommendations in the form of resolutions to the Senate, to the Student Assembly or to the President."

Assembly Discusses The Four Questions

by Anne Dalton
Hatchet Staff Writer

TWO STUDENT Assembly members with different plans for restructuring University government will see them on the ballot of a referendum this week, although both proposals failed to gain two-thirds support at last Thursday's Assembly meeting.

By gathering 150 signatures on petitions, supporters of the measures got them on the referendum scheduled for tomorrow and Wednesday in Woodhull House. Voting will be from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. on both days.

A third alternative, drawn up by Student Assembly President Neil Portnow, was presented to the Student Assembly at Thursday's meeting but is not ready for a vote.

Stanley Grimm, Center Governing Board chairman and author of one of the proposals to be voted on this week, put on the ballot a proposal for a constitutional convention to decide on new University governing structures; while Jim Swartz, author of the other proposal, urges the formation of a Student Academic Council with essentially the same characteristics as the Student Assembly.

Grimm's proposal failed Thursday to win the necessary two-thirds Assembly support, but he had already collected enough signatures to petition the proposal onto the ballot. He would abolish the present Assembly and replace the scheduled February elections with elections for a constitutional convention.

The Grimm proposal calls for 47 elected delegates to the convention, representing faculty and students from each school, plus five University administrators. This convention would draw the blueprint for future University governance.

According to Grimm, "Students, faculty and administrators have a vested interest in the University affairs." If they decide it is in their interest to revise the constitution, it will be revised. If they benefit from no government there will be none. "I don't see how (my plan) can lose," he said cheerily.

Majority OK's Coed Dorms; Adams Switch Considered

by Steve Ross
Hatchet Staff Writer

GW'S RESIDENCE HALLS moved closer to sexual integration this weekend, as results of dorm-wide referendums heavily favored co-ed living.

In announcing a 466-68 vote favoring the experiment, Adams Hall dorm council president Roy Chang yesterday said a meeting this week between himself and Marianne Phelps, associate dean of students in charge of residence halls, could determine the future of the experiment.

Chang said there is now a possibility of Adams Hall becoming co-ed next semester, and that other dorms could make the switch next fall.

Of 3000 questionnaires handed out, only about 560 were turned in, a "disappointing" turnout, according to Chang. But both male as well as female students heavily favored the co-ed idea. On the question of co-ed dorms for freshmen, 324 favored the idea, 201 were opposed. However, the females split evenly on the issue.

Female students also differed from males on the question of parental approval. While 191 out of 282 males said their parents would have no objections to co-ed arrangements, only 123 out of 260 females thought that their parents would feel the same way, 23 were undecided.

There was difference also on the question of whether a co-ed dorm would inhibit personal freedoms. Only 73 out of 276 males felt that it would while 121 out of 258 females said it would.

On the remainder of the questions there was general agreement between the sexes, as 409 felt co-ed dorms would require no new rules and 471 thought that living in a co-ed dorm would not be harmful academically.

On the question of what problems would arise from the experiment, 380 felt that there would be no problems although such drawbacks as noise, lack of privacy, sexual promiscuity and immature conduct were considered possible pitfalls. In general it was thought that co-ed dorms would improve the residence hall system by creating a more natural situation for men and women to cooperate.

Ironically, a plurality of men and women said that they planned to live in apartments next year.

Miss Phelps said the results did not surprise her, although more people were opposed to co-ed dorms than she expected. Miss Phelps, who has been working with Chang on the question throughout the semester said that "Housing should be based on what students want, so far as humanly possible."

Julian Bond Speaks In Lisner Today

BLACK ACTIVIST and Georgia state legislator Julian Bond will speak at Lisner Auditorium today at 3:30. His topic will be "Collision Course in a Divided America."

Bond, 29, helped to found the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) in 1960 while he was a student at Morehouse College in Atlanta, Georgia. His work with SNCC led to civil rights drives and voter registration campaigns in Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi and Arkansas.

Bond won three elections to a seat in the Georgia House of Representatives before he was finally seated. He was prevented from taking office the first time by legislators who objected to his dovish Vietnam statements.

After winning a second election in February, 1966, a special House Committee voted again to bar him from membership. He won a third election in November, 1966 and the next month the U.S. Supreme Court ruled unanimously that Bond should be seated and on January 9, 1967, Bond finally took the oath of office.

In 1968, Bond was co-chairman of the Georgia Loyal National Democratic Delegation, an insurgent group which was unsuccessful in unseating the hand-picked, allegedly "lily-white" Georgia Delegation. Later in the convention Bond was nominated for Vice-President but he withdrew his name when it was pointed out that he was too young constitutionally to hold the office.

Bond plans to challenge conservative Republican Fletcher Thompson next year for Georgia's fifth district Congressional seat. He feels his chances are improved with a jump in Negro voter registration in the state from 6% in 1965 to 60% in 1968.

Donation fee for Bond's address will be $.50. A reception in Lower Lisner will follow the speech.

Program Board

Political Programs Planned

A WIDE VARIETY of programs is being scheduled for the Spring semester by the Political Affairs Committee of the University Center Program Board.

At the committee's Thursday night meeting in Thurston Hall the group discussed plans for bringing such controversial speakers as Dr. Timothy Leary and folk singer Pete Seeger to GW.

The programs for the spring semester will be of three types; speakers, panels, and group discussions on foreign and domestic affairs.

Tentative plans for next semester's activities include a two day program on the draft and a conservation day with Stuart Udall, Morris Udall and Pete Seeger hopefully participating. Also planned for March a program on the disarmament talks in Helsinki and in April a program concerning civil rights and black people.

On the third Wednesday of each month the State Department is holding a symposium on foreign affairs. The subjects of these symposiums are not announced until the beginning of each month.

In April the board is planning another Economics Day similar to the one it sponsored in October. It will also sponsor programs on Laos and Britain's entry into the Common Market the same month.

Jon Cohan, the Speakers Committee Chairman, said that the political Affairs and Speakers Committees are looking for people to help with all aspects of the programs and that they are open to suggestions.

The Program Board is sponsoring Julian Bond's appearance this afternoon.

PROTECTIVE LIFE Has Done A Lot Of Graduate Study

And we've come up with some pretty important information. For example, we know that college men are in the best health period of their lives, that they have a greater life expectancy, and that they will command greater incomes in less hazardous occupations than most people. And because of this, we've designed a special life insurance-savings plan especially for college men. It's called the Protective Life College Senior Plan, and offers exceptional benefits at preferred rates. Coverage includes accidental death, disability, and a protected insurability benefit. The College Senior Plan has no war exclusion clause, offers full aviation coverage, and becomes completely paid up at normal retirement age. Also, premium deposits may be deferred until earnings increase.

ANTI-YAF students visited the Thursday night meeting of the right-wing campus group.

Anti-YAF Students Invade Meeting During 'Tyranny'

OVER A SCORE of GW radicals, carrying toy machine guns and waving American flags, repeatedly interrupted an anti-Communist film with shouts and heckling during Thursday night's Young Americans for Freedom (YAF) meeting.

The anti-YAF group shouted mock anti-Communist slogans and proclaimed themselves "true American patriots" during the showing of the Fulton Lewis II narrated film, "Tyranny."

YAF leader Ed Grebow said after the meeting that he was about to call the campus police before the hecklers finally quieted down. However, during the meeting, Grebow remained visually unperturbed by the taunts.

The hecklers quieted down at the request of the YAF faculty advisor, Prof. Charles A. Moser, who invited the group to discuss the film and its message.

Moser addressed the group of self-proclaimed radicals saying that he hoped they would never be forced to live under a Communist system.

One anti-YAF respondent claimed that "we are allowed to think freely, but can we act effectively? We can't stop the war."

Moser compared Russian government with U.S. government saying, "The American system is basically good at its core though some phenomena are bad, while the Soviet system is basically evil with some good phenomena."

After the meeting, Grebow said of the interruptions, "We don't disrupt their meetings and we expect the same courtesy from them."

Grebow added that four new members joined YAF during the meetings, "probably because they were appalled by the childish behavior they saw."

YAF does not usually announce their meetings, but Grebow said that he felt the conservatives on campus have an obligation to bring their message to the student body.

Senate Agrees to Review Dismissal of Gavrilovic

by Sue McMenamin
and Bob McClenon
Hatchet Staff Writers

THE CONTROVERSY over the imminent dismissal of Slavic Languages Assistant Professor Kosara Gavrilovic widened last week as the University Senate granted her request to a review of the case by a special committee.

Meanwhile, the Student Ad Hoc Committee for an Open Defense of Professor Gavrilovic will begin circulating a petition today among students in the Slavic Department urging that the Senate committee's hearings be open to the public.

In a letter to Speech Professor Edwin L. Stevens, chairman of the Senate Executive Committee, Mrs. Gavrilovic argued that her removal was "solely for reasons of personal antagonism, primarily political in nature," and that the action against her has violated both the University's Faculty Code and Ordinances and the principles of academic freedom.

The popular instructor was notified in August that her contract, which expires next June, will not be renewed. Details of the decision have not been revealed, but Mrs. Gavrilovic has told her supporters that the official reasons are her "superfluosity" and "professional incompetence."

Stevens attempted this fall to resolve the disputes informally. Although such efforts have been successful in past faculty disagreements, Stevens was unable to arrange a settlement between Mrs. Gavrilovic and the tenured professors of the Slavic Department who had voted her ouster.

When Stevens reported that the negotiations had failed, the Executive Committee nominated a special committee of three full professors to review the case, as provided by the Faculty Code.

The Senate, at its Friday meeting, approved the nominations unanimously without debate. Serving as chairman will be Chemistry Professor Reuben E. Wood, former chairman of the Executive Committee. The other members will be Law Professor Richard C. Allen and Biology Professor Edith Mortensen.

The Faculty Code provides that the special committee shall mediate the case and make recommendations. It does not specify whether open hearings are to be held, apparently leaving this decision to the committee. Wood could not be reached for comment as to whether he will hold open hearings and as to whom he will ask to testify.

The official reasons for Mrs. Gavrilovic's dismissal were set forth in a confidential letter to Columbian College Dean Calvin D. Linton from Professor Helen Yakobson, chairman of the Slavic Department. Mrs. Yakobson, who is generally regarded as Mrs. Gavrilovic's chief opponent, may well be called to testify before the special committee, a prospect which Mrs. Gavrilovic's supporters view with glee.

Since they feel publicity can only help their cause, they are requesting that the reasons for her removal be made public and that the committee hearing be open. The Ad Hoc Committee has abandoned its move for a public hearing before Dean Linton.

The students' petition will be given, with the permission of instructors, to students in courses from Slavic 5 through the graduate level. Ad Hoc Committee members state that if they are not permitted to distribute petitions in class they will do so in the halls.

The Ad Hoc Committee states in its petition that Mrs. Gavrilovic is a "competent and inspiring teacher," and objects to the fact that she is "being fired by a closed committee of the Slavic Department."

Prof. Gavrilovic

In addition to the petitions, the student group has sent about 300 questionnaires to Professor Gavrilovic's former students. The questionnaires are the same as those filled out by her Slavic 91 (Russian Literature) class last week. Those forms were filled with enthusiastic praise for the professor.

Michigan Will Draft 1-A's in 1970, 1-366

DETROIT, Mich. — (CPS) — The head of the Selective Service for the state of Michigan has announced that all males 1-A during 1970 can expect to be drafted no matter what lottery number they received during this month's drawing.

The director, according to the student newspaper at the University of Detroit, has warned students not to give up draft deferments if they have a high lottery number, for Michigan's draft calls are expected to require calling everyone, number 1-366.

The statement, in effect, says the lottery was meaningless for Michigan. The question remains whether the director's statement was meant simply to scare those with a deferment and a high lottery number out of dropping their deferment this coming year. The scare technique could be used to enlarge the group available for military duty in future years and to prevent students with high lottery numbers from escaping the draft this year, and therefore permanently.

On the other hand, the statement could mean exactly what it says, and that the lottery is meaningless for all areas where a local board needs all the 1-A men it has available.

There were no changes in the quota system for local draft boards with the change to the lottery. Some members of Congress are suggesting that local boards be abolished and that one national draft board take its place. No action will come on such suggestions until the 1970 sessions begin.

Gianessi Acquitted; 'Reasonable Doubt'

by B.D. Colen
Hatchet Staff Writer

LEONARD GIANESSI was acquitted Thursday of charges that he stole a banner blanket from two Navy recruiters in front of the GW Student Union on Sept. 23.

The jury sitting on Gianessi's trial in courtroom five of the D.C. Court of General Sessions returned its not guilty verdict at 5:35 p.m. after two hours of deliberation.

Reliable sources reported afterwards that when the jury was first polled, the vote was seven to five in favor of acquittal. But after the panel discussed the implications of the phrase "reasonable doubt," all 12 jurors voted to acquit.

The trial basically revolved around the question of reasonable doubt Thursday as the prosecution presented its final witness, FBI special agent Angelo J. Lano, who described the arrest of Gianessi and the recovery of the blanket. The defense presented three witnesses who all claimed to have seen the theft of the blanket, but testified that they did not see Gianessi steal it.

Special agent Lano told the court he and nine other agents took part in the arrest of Gianessi at his home at 2424 K St., N.W., at about 8:55 a.m. on the morning of Sept. 29.

"The banner," said Lano, who entered the house with six other agents to make the arrest for the theft of government property, "was lying on the second floor landing. We started to walk across the floor and there was the banner ... with footsteps, as though it was used as a rug."

Assistant U.S. Attorney Ken Robinson made continual attempts to enforce in the jurors' minds the fact that the banner, which said "Fly Navy," was being used as a rug. His line of questioning drew an objection from defense attorney William D. Rogers, a member of the firm of Arnold and Porter. The objection was sustained.

After the cross examination of agent Lano, during which attorney Rogers had Lano state that Gianessi "didn't have" the blanket at the time he was arrested, the government rested its case.

All three defense witnesses, Student Activities Director Jay Boyar, Student Assembly member Scott Baena and Hearing Committee member David Dan, contradicted the testimony of key prosecution witness Henry Ziegler.

Ziegler testified Wednesday that he saw Gianessi and SDS leader Nick Greer take the blanket from the recruiters. All three defense witnesses, while being unable to say that Gianessi did not steal the blanket, testified that they did not see him with the blanket.

Scott Baena, who agreed with Ziegler's testimony that the two of them were standing about ten feet from the recruiters at the time of the theft, said that somebody "walked over to the table and removed the blanket.... My attention," said Baena, "was attracted to one individual."

"Was that individual Mr. Gianessi?" asked defense attorney Rogers.

"No."

"Were you able to identify Mr. Gianessi as either individual?"

Again Baena answered in the negative.

The two major points on which Baena and Ziegler disagreed were the size of the crowd in the area of the table (set by Ziegler at ten and Baena at 20-50) and Gianessi's presence or non-presence.

Ziegler said after the trial that the discrepancies in the numbers given by him, Baena, Boyar, Dan and the Navy recruiters, arose over the fact that each was speaking of the numbers within different areas.

The high point in the second day of the trial came when David Dan told a tale of psychology and bananas.

Trying extremely hard to discredit Dan as a witness, the prosecutor asked him why his story of the details surrounding the theft of the blanket differed from the stories of other witnesses.

"I recall a psychology class," said Dan, "where two professors walked into the room armed with unpeeled bananas."

The judge, jury, defense attorney and spectators began to laugh. "You may step down," said the prosecutor.

"No," interjected Judge W. Byron Sorrell, "let him continue." The judge then spun his chair around and began laughing with his back to the jury.

"Well," said Dan, "the professors came in with the bananas and half the students later said they were armed with rifles. So I can only say what I saw and not what other people saw."

In his summation, the prosecutor asked the jury to judge Gianessi by "the bad intentions which he may have had."

"Mr. Gianessi made a mistake," said the city's attorney, "he took it for granted that no one would tell. But there was one man with a conscience, Mr. Ziegler." And "ten days later that conscience was still with him and he went to the Vice President of the school (H. John Cantini) and identified FBI pictures."

"There's only one man who can point a finger at this man (Gianessi) and he's done it. I'm asking you to convict that man."

Defense attorney Rogers told the jury that "the determination you are about to make is a substantial one. It will have a serious effect upon the life of this student."

"I'm not asking you to believe Mr. Ziegler is lying," said Rogers, pointing out the differences in testimony. "I submit to you that it's understandable that he could have been confused."

Despite a final plea from the prosecutor that Mr. Gianessi be convicted, a plea in which the attorney called Gianessi's alleged act a "slap in the face" to the recruiters and an "insult to the jury," the jury followed Roger's argument that the testimony was too conflicting to eliminate "all reasonable doubt."

Judicial Committee Hears Sherburne Discuss Records

by Dick Beer

Hatchet Staff Writer

LACKING THE QUORUM necessary to conduct regular business, the Ad Hoc Committee on Judicial Systems held an informal discussion Wednesday on the privacy of students' academic records and personal files.

Associate Dean of Students Paul Sherburne presented to the three committee members present a tentative draft of general guidelines relating to the University's handling of the student's records.

Sherburne outlined a policy currently being used at the University of Maryland, where a record is maintained for each student on purely academic level with just the student's grades, and a personal file which records any disciplinary action taken against the student.

Under such a system, the academic record is available to any interested party unless the student wishes it otherwise and the personal file remains confidential unless the student himself agrees that it be opened to some designated party.

There was some confusion regarding the present policy of the Registrar's office concerning the privacy of records but all the committee members seemed pleased with the specific assurances of privacy contained in the plan submitted by Sherburne.

Prof. John Morgan was particularly concerned with the permanent damage which could be done to a student's career as a result of information in the personal file and suggested that it record only final actions taken by the University against a student.

Morgan also suggested that students found guilty of cheating have that violation recorded on their academic record rather than in the personal file.

Also considered was the question of how long the University should keep the records of students after they graduate. The present duration of record maintenance, which currently approaches infinity, was criticized.

Dean Sherburne emphasized that fact that a student's behavioral patterns tend to change in the years after he leaves college, which would make prolonged retention of his personal file unfair to the students in his later life.

Morgan then questioned why the University should have to preserve records at all and speculated on the possibility of junking all former students' records.

Grad Students Required

Physics Prof. Artley Zuchelli proposed an amendment, later passed unanimously, changing the wording to "make its recommendations in the form of resolutions conveyed to the Senate, the Student Assembly and the President."

Zuchelli said he specifically wanted to prevent the committee from sending recommendations directly and solely to the president. He expressed concern that if there were no requirement that the Senate and Assembly be notified of committee action they might not discover what it was.

Student Assembly President Neil Portnow spoke against the amendment, saying it was "directly opposed to the spirit and the letter of the whole document. Student Life is a direct input to the president from the students and this input must be transferred to the new committee."

If the power of the proposed committee is thus restricted, Portnow argued, the Student Life Committee should be preserved.

Zuchelli responded to Portnow by accusing the Assembly president of wanting "to see a joint committee which has the power of bypassing the Student Assembly and the University Senate and has assured to it that it can send recommendations to the president, charging him to take action, irrespective of what the Assembly and Senate may wish."

Yielding the chair to Senate Executive Committee Chairman Edwin L. Stevens, President Lloyd H. Elliott entered debate to expound on University decision-making on three levels of urgency. In crisis, he explained, he would confer "as directly as possible" with Portnow and Stevens, ignoring all other members of the Senate and the Assembly as well as any joint committee they might set up.

A joint committee by itself would be useful, he continued, on issues "that can be discussed by a group, while they may not wait for next month's Senate meeting or next week's Assembly meeting." Problems involving lengthy debate would be left to the two assemblies and their committees.

In a further amendment, the Senate placed new restrictions on the committee's membership specifying that of the seven student members, three must be graduate students.

This change, proposed by Chemistry Prof. Theodore Perros, was also attacked by Portnow and by at-large representative Henry Ziegler, who noted that graduate students are seldom elected to the Assembly and that this is because of their own lack of interest.

History Prof. Peter P. Hill felt that "graduate students do not represent a self-conscious constituency" and that requiring their membership on a conference committee to be greater than their representation on the Assembly would "distort the membership and make it less of a joint committee."

Perros, on the other hand, felt it might promote healthy graduate participation in the Assembly, making that body less of an "undergraduate vehicle." His amendment was adopted by a vote of 10-9.

The joint committee is to have a student co-chairman and a faculty co-chairman, both elected by the committee. The faculty co-chairman must be a member of the Senate but the student co-chairman need not be an Assembly member. Both the Assembly and the Senate must be represented on the committee.

Faculty members of the joint committee are elected by the Senate, and, if the Senate elects only one of its own members, it determines in effect that he shall be the faculty co-chairman. Faculty committee members would thus be able to vote for the student while student members could not help elect the faculty counterpart. This situation, discovered by the Hatchet last night, was not mentioned during Friday's debate.

Finally, the Senate added a lengthy amendment by Prof. Reuben Wood of the Chemistry Department expanding the clause which required approval of both the Assembly and the Senate before any changes be made in the committee structure or powers.

During the first year of the committee's existence, Wood's amendment reads, its operations shall be reviewed and either or both of the parent bodies may propose extension, modification or abolition of the new group. If none of these is agreed upon within a year, the committee will cease to exist.

Chances are good that the entire version will be rejected by the Student Assembly, just as the 1968 Student Council rejected an earlier Senate-amended resolution to set up a joint committee, according to Portnow and Assembly Vice President Dave Berz.

Almost two years ago, Portnow's predecessor, Jim Knically, warned that he could not accept the version the Senate sent him, charging that "the Senate has altered the intent of the motion in order to satisfy its desire to keep itself an exclusively faculty body and to maintain its current power."

Knically referred primarily to a section which would have given two voting and debating privileges on the Senate floor. This subject is not mentioned in the current draft; in fact, the version which came to this year's Senate was identical to that which left the Senate of two years ago.

Portnow bases his allegation that student influence is being reduced by the Senate on their denial of an input to the president from the Assembly. Commenting Saturday on the resolution's fate, Portnow also complained that "we're faced with the same confusion (in structure) we've had before and we'll have to go through everything one hundred times."

Portnow further maintained that "we're just continuing the bureaucracy, we have done nothing to solve the problem" of streamlining University structures and that the Senate's action "showed a tremendous lack of any kind of trust" in the student government.

Gavrilovic — from p. 3

Senate Review Set

David Welch, chairman of the group, said it is trying to serve as a research committee. Their aim, he explained, is to present a factual report on student opinion of Mrs. Gavrilovic's competence.

Welch also stated that his group is opposed to the Senate taking any action on the matter over the Christmas vacation.

When questioned on these developments, Mrs. Gavrilovic said it would be inappropriate for her to comment on the specifics of the case before the special committee meets. She made it clear she was in no way connected with the student group, although she was "moved and touched" by its support.

The role of the special committee is primarily to mediate the dispute. If it cannot arrange an agreement between Mrs. Gavrilovic and Mrs. Yakobson it may recommend formal proceedings before the Senate Committee on Professional Ethics and Academic Freedom.

Since both the Slavic Department and Mrs. Gavrilovic have indicated that their positions are set, a hearing before the Committee on Academic Freedom is probable. Members of the committee may be challenged if disqualified, in which case the Executive Committee will select replacements.

Due process in the formal hearing is also guaranteed by the Faculty Code. Mrs. Gavrilovic will have the right to call, examine, and cross-examine witnesses, and be represented by counsel (which she has already retained.) The proceedings will, however, be closed to the public, although a stenographic record will be kept.

The decision of the hearing committee will not be final. The committee will report to the Senate, which will make recommendations to the Board of Trustees. The Faculty Code bars any public statement on the actions of the committee or the Senate until the vote of the Trustees is announced.

Such a hearing before the Committee on Academic Freedom would apparently be unprecedented. The Hatchet has been unable to find any record of such a hearing in the past. One faculty member at Friday's Senate meeting also could not recall a previous instance of the preliminary step, the establishment of the special mediating committee.

Vote No, If At All

Tomorrow's Student Assembly sponsored referendum can only be described as ludicrous. Because no time has been allowed for any discussion of the questions on the ballot outside of this issue of the Hatchet, those students who are aware that a referendum is being held may vote in favor of proposals which will do little to bring about increased student input in the University's decision making process.

If they had taken their work a bit more seriously, student assembly members would have proposed referendum questions in ample time to insure a complete discussion of the merits of each proposal. Instead, two plans which drastically alter the nature of student government were first presented at a Student Assembly meeting, three days before voting in a heretofore unscheduled referendum is to begin. One proposal, listed on the official referendum ballot as reproduced in an advertisement in this paper and prepared for the printer, even lacks the 150 signatures needed to put it on the ballot.

Ultimately more important than the abominable planning of this referendum are the questions themselves. The proposal which calls for a constitutional convention attended by students, faculty, and administrators indicates a lack of understanding of campus politics. Faculty and administrators are not likely to seize the opportunity to serve on a body which is going to create "a true University government structure," which is the proposal's stated objective. The convention, which could drag on for months if it ever were set up, would only delay student ambitions to create an all University Assembly.

Equally disappointing is the plan to change the Student Assembly into a Student Academic Council which we see as only an exchange of names and titles. If students are to get involved in academic decision making, they must participate at the departmental and school levels where these decisions are made. The present student government was restructured last year to gain a student voice in academic affairs and has had little success. The formation of another all-student group consisting of representatives from each school is not the change which is necessary and will do nothing to reverse the current impotent student position.

No Thanks

Ironically enough, the faculty Senate's acceptance of a resolution Friday which would establish a joint committee of the Senate and the Student Assembly must be a keen disappointment to the resolution's authors and supporters. By accepting two amendments which would prescribe the student make-up of the committee and change its relationship with the President of the University, the Senate has significantly altered the purposes of the committee.

One amendment offered by Prof. Artley J. Zuchelli insures a much greater role for the Senate on matters of purely student concern. By eliminating the direct unimpeded channel between the President and the joint committee, all of the committee's recommendations would go through the Senate. Previously, the faculty-student Student Life Committee which would be abolished if the new committee were established, reported directly to the President. Under the amended joint committee proposal, which now goes back to the Student Assembly for its consideration, a faculty-student group dealing almost exclusively with student matters will make recommendations to an all faculty body. Besides reducing the utility of the new committee, which was designed to expedite the decision-making process, the amended version of the proposal gives the Senate an improper new extra level of influence on the decisions of the President.

The second objectionable amendment, offered by Prof. Theodore Perros, requires that three of the seven student members of the committee be graduate students. Although we favor increased graduate student participation in the affairs of the University, this attempt to bring it about distorts the purposes of the legislation which was before the Senate. The new committee is to be a joint committee of the University Senate and the Student Assembly. The Assembly consists of 24 members of whom only one represents a graduate school only because graduate students have continuously declined to be a part of student government. Furthermore, as numerous faculty members have pointed out, the graduate students "do not represent a self conscious constituency" and are likely to represent only themselves if named to the joint committee. If the Senate feels that a body should be created to represent all members of the University community as we do, it should do so directly and immediately. It should not do so by changing the nature of a committee which was designed for other purposes.

In short, the Senate's action Friday has only served to make more difficult the new committee's charge to "facilitate all efforts to improve student-faculty relations."

Letters to the Editor

False Impression

THE HATCHET report of December 8 of the December 5th meeting of the Senate Committee on Student Relationships gives a wrong impression in suggesting that the amendments offered by Professors Lewis and Kirsch were "designed to specifically prevent departmental student-faculty advisory councils from applying policies on salary, promotion and tenure in individual cases." The Joint Statement on Student Rights and Responsibilities being considered at that time already contained language specifying that such applications to individuals of departmental policy are a matter of faculty responsibility. What the amendments were designed to eliminate was a clause which provided further that "this responsibility can and may be delegated by the faculty".

Likes to Read

TO ALL THE Wonderful, considerate professors at GW that have the genuine concern for students: The idea of a reading period between Christmas and exams really wasn't a bad idea, although it would have been better to have exams before Christmas (as the students voted in favor for 10-1 about two years ago). But the professors thought it would give them too much work to do. Fine!

The reading period is supposed to be for doing extra things for class i.e. observations for education, writing papers, studying. However, some smart professors, (and many of the other kind have followed suit), have decided to hold class during this week-long period, because they have not organized their time so as to finish their courses when they are supposed to be finished. So now, who does the burden fall on? The students, of course!

Now, instead of the two day reading period we used to have (which wasn't so bad), we don't have any reading period at all. Classes end Friday and exams begin Saturday. Is this fair??? But, after all, we're only students.

So the pounding and the crunching of that horrible machine that has descended upon GW may just as well keep pounding and crunching because we won't have any time to study anyway.

True Greek

AFTER READING "Fraternalities: Deathly Ill," it is obvious that Mr. Preminger never really knew what fraternity life is. It is true, that at this university the Greek way of life is disadvantaged due to its urban nature and the fact that the atmosphere is not the healthiest. But just as GW is an exceptional case in such areas as politics, people, and priorities, so it is different in its regard for social organizations.

As noted, "the sad thing is that any Greek system has the structural framework to be the most powerfully progressive force on any campus." But fraternities do not aspire to power, politically or any other way. They are simply groups of friends who choose to enjoy their leisure time together and develop relationships that can last for life.

Instead of fraternities being deathly ill, I think that taken in perspective, one will find that the environment is deathly ill. But in any case, Dan, thanks for the headlines and a little publicity.

Lilac Phallus

IT'S CALLED A FILLY BILLY, and it's a symbol of everything that's wrong with our society. It's 24 inches long, 1 1/4 inches in diameter, weighs an even pound and comes in gold, silver, white, red, yellow and lilac.

And what is this fashionably colorful phallic object which will soon go on sale at several major New York City department and specialty stores? A women's night stick, designed to break the limb or crush the skull of anyone fool hearty enough to attempt to molest a pretty young thing carrying a Filly Billy.

The Filly Billy is just what it looks and sounds like from its description. It's a club, a dangerous weapon. In the "gay 90's" we had the "ladies pistol," now we are to be blessed with the "ladies club."

The Filly Billy's creator, New Yorker Marilyn Baltar, told the New York Times that the clubs have "a dual purpose—fashion and protection. On one hand, 'she was quoted as saying, 'they are in proper proportion with the maxicoat and pants look everybody is wearing today. And on the other hand, they're a lot cheaper than a $4000 attack dog.' Which is great, if you feel you need an attack dog or a club.

What is disturbing is not so much that young women may feel safer carrying a weapon with which to defend themselves from attack, but the speed and greed which manufacturers and advertisers display in rushing to capitalize upon a national illness, or hope.

"The whole idea," of the Filly Billy, Miss Baltar told the Times, "is just to make a woman feel safe. I see it for the young working girl, whose route may take her through rough blocks. And I also see it for beautiful ladies who live in wealthy neighborhoods and have to walk their poodles at 11 p.m."

Miss Baltar said she got the idea for the clubs from her fiancé. "I picked up a baseball bat in a small town," she told the Times, "and Shelly said 'Hey, that would be a good thing for girls to carry around for protection.' " Miss Baltar can carry one when she runs to the bank.

But then while Miss Baltar has exhibited an unbounded willingness to capitalize on her fellow citizen's fears and troubles, she and her Filly Billy are but one example of this willingness of manufacturers to make our problems worse by making them profitable.

George Kaplan, Couturier in Fur, 730 Fifth Ave., New York City, is another of these profiteers.

Noting that the peace movement is growing in "leaps and bounds," some philistine at Kaplan's decided that what the world, in general, and peace movement in particular, need most is a 13" by 13" dyed French Rabbit fur pillow. And what is dyed on some poor little bunny's butt? The peace symbol, what else?

The bunny pillow is obviously aimed at the more affluent anti-warriors, for $25 is a rather steep price to pay for pillow fight ammunition. But the firm of George Kaplan will undoubtedly make money by capitalizing by our hope and desire for world peace.

Somehow, there's something more than a little, sickening about the thought that rabbits are being killed and skinned in the name of peace. Nor is the thought that people would buy these atrocities any too heart warming.

Yet perhaps the Baltars and Kaplans of this world are not to blame for what they do. They can't be forgiven on the grounds that they know not what they do. That one hasn't really worked for 2000 years.

But who are the real culprits, the manufacturers, or the consumers? All we have to do to end the profitability of hope, fear and sorrow is to stop buying products from those who would capitalize upon them. After all, do you really need that lilac Filly Billy to mix and match with your white baby seal maxi?

Protest Set for Tuesday Xmas Tree Ceremony

DECEMBER'S LOW-KEYED war protests may accelerate in intensity this week, as the annual Presidential Christmas tree lighting could prove to be more interesting than usual.

D.C. Moratorium leaders are calling for a protest rally Tuesday evening behind the White House to coincide with the lighting. President Nixon, keeping with tradition, plans to attend.

A White House spokesman told the Hatchet last night that officials "are aware" of the planned demonstration, but added that "the President's plans for the ceremony have not been altered."

Moratorium officials said the protest will begin at 4:30 p.m. at the "Display of Reindeer."

The Panther Controversy

"Panthers or Mobemen or hippies don't cause the repression—any more than the Viet Cong cause American intervention or the civil rights movement causes racism. Repression happens when those who command the levers of the political system can no longer get them to work, when the accepted methods of governance are ineffective, when the crisis brought on by the failure of leadership overtakes the leaders."

That failure doesn't come out of thin air; it is born of deep faults within the system itself. —Andrew Kopkind

It is ironic that the latest attacks on the Black Panther Party in Chicago and Los Angeles have not weakened the Panthers but rather have dramatized the Panthers' contention that there is a conspiracy to wipe out the Party. Police actions have so widened the Panther base of support that Ralph Abernathy raised a fist to the cameras in Chicago, the Chicago Afro-American Patrolman's League labelled the Chicago killings as "obvious political assassinations" and Syd Finley, NAACP midwest regional director termed the gunfight in Chicago a "modern lynching."

Despite the F.B.I.'s contention that the Panthers represent the greatest present threat to internal security, Panther health clinics, free breakfast programs to feed the children, and free clothing centers, have in some communities done more to aid the poor than local government agencies.

The Justice Department has firmly denied that there is any coordinated national effort to eliminate the Panthers. Black Panther Attorney Charles Gary, however, maintains, "there have been F.B.I. agents in on every one of the arrests involving Black Panthers. Nothing is done without the F.B.I. being in on it. They have tapped telephone wires at all Black Panther headquarters and at the homes of all Black Panthers and their attorneys. All of their homes are being watched constantly."

Common civil liberties seem to have been blatantly disregarded in cases involving the Panthers. Perhaps the most dramatic example were the brutal slayings of Mark Clark and Illinois Panther Chairman Fred Hampton.

Contrary to police accounts of an intense gun battle in Hampton's apartment, the New York Times has stated, "most of the walls were not scarred with the bullets and shot-gun marks one would expect of a shoot-out. There were no bullet marks around the two doors through which the police said they entered. There were no bullet marks in the kitchen and dining room. There were a lot of bullet marks where the Panthers were shot."

In the three-year existence of the Black Panther Party twenty-eight Panthers have been killed by police; twenty-one this year alone. Twenty have been exiled from the United States. Ninety-eight are currently in jail and at least twenty-seven others are under indictment.

Predictably, the thrust of the attack has been against the leadership. Huey Newton, founder of the Party, is presently serving a 15 year jail term for manslaughter. (he was convicted of shooting a policeman, although the court records indicate Newton was facing the man while the fatal bullet entered the body from the back.) Chairman Bobby Seale, in addition to a four year sentence for contempt of court in Chicago now faces murder charges in Connecticut. Eldridge Cleaver, Minister of Information, has been forced to flee the country. David Hilliard, Chief of State, was recently arrested for threatening the life of the President.

Panthers view announced investigations into "possible police brutality" as the beginning of a whitewash to create a halo around police actions. Already there is widespread acceptance in "middle" America of State Attorney Edward V. Hanrahan's statement: "we wholeheartedly commend the police officers for their bravery, their remarkable restraint, and their discipline in the face of this vicious Black Panther attack and we expect every decent citizen of our community to do likewise."

Despite the heavy losses to their leadership the Panthers have persisted in bringing their case before the people. Ray Masai Hewitt, Party Minister of Education, one of the few remaining leaders "at large," has announced plans for a Panther-led delegation to the U.N. protesting U.S. government oppression of black people. The Panthers see government policies as "part and parcel of a scheme to commit genocide on the Black Panther Party." In addition, Eldridge Cleaver is presently seeking means to legally reenter the country to replenish the besieged Party leadership.

The discrepancy between the ideals of American justice and its practical application has been visibly demonstrated by the government's repression of the Black Panther Party. Why does the government view the Panthers as a threat to internal security? Do free breakfasts, health clinics and free clothing centers challenge the American government? Why have more Panthers been arrested in three years than Ku Klux Klansmen have in 103 years? It is obvious that Panthers pose no true military threat.

Perhaps, the threat the Panthers do pose is their ability to expose the contradictions in American society.

It Could Be Something

Mark Olshaker

UPON COMING TO GW, many people are surprised to discover that the University literary magazine is not more extensive, more frequent and better than it is. Many other people who have been at GW for several years are unaware of even the existence of this type of publication on campus. Both attitudes are significant in determining why this University has not made any important contributions to the literary and graphic arts through the medium of student periodicals.

The reasons for the relative failure of the literary magazine, lately dubbed "The Potomac," over the past few years are varied. First, of course, is the problem with student support. Second is the lack of administrative financial backing to a great enough extent. And third of the chronic lack of interest which has been apparent in many members of past editorial staffs. The solutions to these problems are interrelated.

For the past several years, 400 copies of each of two yearly issues have been printed. It has been impossible to even give away at least 100 of those. So this year the editor and staff have decided to cut the press run back to 300. This in itself is a sad commentary for a University with boasts 15,000 students and is always represented by at least 1000 at any of the recent losing basketball efforts.

This lack of support from the University community could be one reason why past editorial staffs have been derelict in some of their responsibilities, such as adequate editing, solicitations and choice of material. But who can blame them when their efforts will be appreciated by few other than themselves, their parents and loyal (very loyal) friends?

But this year's magazine staff for some reason seems to consider itself on a mission to save the product. And if it is not saved soon, it will probably go the way of the "Wig," a noble but short-lived attempt.

From all indication, current literary magazine editor Evelyn Levsky and her staff have not only sought the best material from the best writers on campus, but have actually gone so far as to become editorially selective as well. In the past this sort of thing was held to a minimum, for the first dramatic script to appear in "The Potomac," authored by me, was written when I was a junior in high school, which says something about past editorial standards.

In an effort to offset some of the cost of printing the first semester's issue, which will be out Feb 2, the magazine staff is selling patronships for a dollar. For this dollar the donor may have his name placed in the magazine and receive a free copy. Less tangibly, he will also know that he is doing something to rescue a somewhat dying institution which could be one of the few we have to speak well for the self-expressive abilities (literacy) of the GW student body.

With support from the students and faculty, the magazine could continue to grow in size, number of issues per year, and most importantly, quality. Should this be the case, the administration would be less unwilling to throw something into the coffers. And then promising young writers and artists coming to GW (few they may be) will have something to aim toward.

But for now, give your money (there is a table in the Student Union), submit your work for next semester, and help prove that GW has another intellectual resource of which it can be proud. To paraphrase Marlon Brando, "It could be something, Charlie."

Dance Studio Theatre

Choreographers Experiment

by Robin Reid
Hatchet Staff Writer

THE GW MODERN DANCE COMPANIES were back in action this past week with their Dance Studio Theater. Having performed off-campus on several occasions this year, including the Choreotho at the University of Maryland, last Thursday's studio concert marked their first campus performance of the semester.

The primary purpose of this concert was to provide potential choreographers with an opportunity to experiment in composing and producing a work of dance. There were no restrictions to style or theme and all members of the graduate and undergraduate companies were invited to explore themselves and create a dance according to their own tastes. Occasional advice from the dance instructors helped both the fledgling choreographers and the dancers to achieve a professional quality for the performance.

Two of the selections, however, were not choreographed by students. "Waltzes," by the well-known Charles Weidman, was an especially pretty work. Of the 16 short "waltzes" choreographed as a tribute to Doris Humphrey, only the first six were performed, although they will be performed in their entirety in March. Charles Weidman was at GW earlier this year and it was at this time that he taught the dance companies his Waltzes.

Nancy Johnson was the other non-student choreographer. A member of the dance staff, she experimented with the use of cloth -- its shapes, sounds, and effect on movement. Hers was a solo performance, which she hopes to expand in the future.

The student choreography took different directions. There were Indian and African influenced works, jazz spoofs and dramatic dances. The freedom to explore was not limited to the choreography, but extended to lighting, make-up and costuming.

Kathy Kane created two dances -- a jazz spoof and a duet. The former was a lot of fun and teasing, while the latter went along more serious lines; a poem, "I am Waiting" by Ferlinghetti, provided serious thoughts to accompany the abstract dance.

Another direction was Patricia Poindexter who created a solo dance around music by Ravi Shankar. Entitled "Night Fire," the dance proved to be modern dance movement accented heavily with Indian postures and patterns.

The comic piece of the concert was "Stuhls and Stripes Forever". It was created last year in a dance composition course by Roberta Duncan and Betsy Richardson. They decided to revive it and the end result is a nonsensical, but most enjoyable dance.

Not to be limited by the traditional definition of modern dance, La Verne Howell choreographed a dance based on movement derived from African tribal dances. The resulting "Ritual" with its accompaniment provided by two drummers and the African print costumes pulsed its way to the audience and was well received.

The final selection on this program was dramatic. It told a love story -- contemporary style. Classical, jazz and rock dancing were incorporated into this work by Bobbi Sternberg.

The dance department would like to have more such concerts. They have eager dancers in their companies, a valuable resource of potential choreographers. Hopefully the completion of the new theater will permit them the opportunity to expand; that is, to delve as fully as possible into the many aspects of modern dance, a step they have been long awaiting.

GW Orchestra

GW CHORUS AND Orchestra, under the direction of Dale Krider, will present its winter concert tomorrow at 8:30 P.M. in Lisner Auditorium. The concert is a traditional part of the University's Holiday Season activities.

With student, faculty and guest soloists, the chorus will present Haydn's "Mass No. 3 (The Lord Nelson Mass)" as well as several seasonal excerpts from Handel's "Messiah". The soloists will be: Aline Chu, soprano; Eunice Hill, alto; David Sundquist, tenor and Jule Zabawa, baritone.

The concert will be open to the public free of charge.

This event is presented and sponsored by the Department of Music, under the supervision of the chairman, George Steiner.

National Ballet Gives Us Romantic Food for Thought

by Endrik Parrest
Hatchet Staff Writer

THE WORD ROMANTIC is often misunderstood. A dictionary will define romanticism as a catch-all word embracing vague ideas and sentiments which have in common their unrealism. For us, the romantics, this is not enough. Each of us knows in his heart what romance is.

Ballet as an art is romantic. Almost all story ballets are about love. (Some have said that all ballet is erotic, and can basically have only erotic appeal. This cannot, of course, be said about what we call modern dance.) Perhaps ballet then is uniquely in a position to tell us what romantic means.

The National Ballet a week ago gave us food for thought and also for feeling. Romantic art must be savored (must all art? Not any more, I think.) It cannot be understood only by mind. We consider ourselves lucky to think we understand it at all.

"La Sonnambula" is one of the very few narrative ballets by Balanchine. Balanchine is by temperament a classicist for whom beauty is found in pure dance which is not immediately meaningful. It is really beyond meaning. Criticism becomes an afterthought by which we try to relate beauty to our ordinary lives.

Our task is made considerably easier when Balanchine, by creating a sequential narrative, does part of our work for us. "La Sonnambula" (sometimes called Night Shadow) was derived from the opera of the same name by Vincenzo Bellini. It was created in 1946 for the still young New York City Ballet. The music was arranged by Vittorio Rieti from several Bellini operas and retains the dramatic quality of romantic opera.

I was fortunate in having seen the current New York City production a week before the National one, which was staged by John Taras. Had I not seen it, I would be tempted to attribute the unevenness evident in the dance at Lisner to sloppiness on the part of the National. Instead I think the ballet, while a work with much that is inescapably brilliant, has in its structure much that lends itself to sloppiness.

The ballet begins with a masked ball at which an elderly host is receiving guests with a beautiful young coquette at his side. When the poet, played in two performances by Frederick Franklin and Desmond Kelly, arrives he is reluctantly introduced by the host to the coquette. After a pas de deux during which he is apprehensive and she doing her thing, he is left alone to bemoan her disappearance. Then enters La Sonnambula, the sleepwalker (Denise LeComte), who is pursued by the poet but, unnoticed, leaves the hall, with the poet still in pursuit. This has been espied by the coquette, who tells the host upon his return. (The sleepwalker is his wife). The host flashes a dagger and exits. The poet returns to die on stage. La Sonnambula returns and the poet is placed in her arms and she returns with him to her chamber.

The cumulative effect of this drama is itself immense. It would be very difficult indeed, given the music and the dramatic choreography, not to feel moved at the end of this ballet. (The Friday performance was the ultimate test. La Sonnambula was last in a program with two weak ballets, each in its own way, imitative by Jean-Paul Comelin.)

Balanchine's manner in group dance, however, seems not well integrated with the narrative. There is some very fine narrative dance here, particularly in the dance of the poet and La Sonnambula, but there is also some dance which is neither contributory to the story nor very good. I am thinking especially of the dance of Blackamoors and the hoop dance, two divertissements.

As a romantic ballet La Sonnambula succeeds. We have been witness to a human tragedy. Ballet cannot show man in all his complexity of mind and body. But it can show men's actions in a perspective that no other art can show. Ballet has a means of feeling what cannot be known. What does the picture of the dead poet carried by the alive yet unknowing Sonnambula mean to you? It would, I think, be your idea of what romance is.

Mountaineers Edge Colonials, 90-89

The Colonials lost again Saturday afternoon, but, of greater importance to GW fans, the Colonials may have finally found their way after wandering rather aimlessly for the first two weeks of the season. For the record, the Mountaineers of West Virginia University edged GW 90-89 before 6200 at Mountaineer Field House at Morgantown.

Prior to the game, Coach Wayne Dobbs made several changes that proved to be effective throughout the game. Ron Munn and Harold Rhyne, neither of whom had managed to get untacked so far this season, were benched in favor of Ralph Barnett and Walt Szubiak. Barnett scored only four points, but played an excellent defensive and passing game. Szubik, one of the strongest players on the squad, played a very impressive game underneath, collecting 19 rebounds and scoring 15 points.

Also, the Colonials returned to the two-guard, 2-3 offense that served them so well last season. Over the first four games of this year, GW was operating out of a 1-3-1 offense that was stagnant at best. The team definitely felt more at ease working out of the comfortable, old 2-3. For the first time this year, GW shot over 40% from the floor and made under 20 turnovers.

The Colonials played a consistent game Saturday and, again for the first time this season, did not collapse under second half pressure. The score was tied nine times in the game with the largest GW lead nine points after 14 minutes of play. The score at the half was 53-49, and when West Virginia took a three point lead at 64-61, it looked like a rout was on. But the Colonials came back and regained the lead, before two foul shots by WVU's Wil Robinson iced the game for the Mountaineers with 14 seconds to go.

There is still room for improvement in the Colonials' play, of course. GW's shooting could improve and the Colonials need a bit more work against the zone press defense, but, hopefully the corner has been turned and the season will not be quite as long as had been feared.

Back in D.C., the freshmen were even less successful, as they fell to the frosh from American University, 88-81. Randy Click scored 33 points to lead the unsuccessful Colonial frosh.

Colonials Face Three; Fordham Leads Card

by Martin Wolf
Hatchet Sports Writer

FORDHAM AND ARMY serve as competition late this week, as the Colonials head out for two games at College Park on Friday and Saturday nights.

Fordham serves as Friday night's opposition. Gunning for a second consecutive NIT appearance, Fordham is able to throw seven lettermen and four good sophomores at the Buff.

Preferring to start veterans and use the sophs as support, coach Ed Conlin will probably go with 6-6 Ken Crusius at center and 6-2 rebounder Charlie Yelverton and 6-5 Bob Kellert at forward. In the backcourt are John Burik and Bill Mainor at 5-10 and 6-2 respectively. George Zambetti, who led the frosh with 22.8 points per game, and Tom Sullivan (19.1ppg) are two of the promising sophs.

Last year, Army, the Colonials' opponent on Saturday night, led the nation in defense, on their way to a fourth place finish in the NIT. They have a chance to repeat at least the former record.

Three big returnees are forwards Doug Clevenger (6-2) and Mike Gyovai (6-5) and Jim Oxley (12.6ppg) at guard. Several other returnees plus several good sophs round out the Cadet picture.

Admission to both games is free for all GW students with student ID's. Both games will begin at 7:00 pm and will be followed by a game between Maryland and the team not playing GW that night.

The Colonials face three opponents in basketball action this week. All three of these games are played away from Fort Myer, though two of the three will be played at College Park, Maryland.

The Buff put their unbeaten conference record on the line Tuesday night as they invade Williamsburg, Virginia for a game against William and Mary. This contest will mark the Colonials first appearance in the Indians' new gym, which has replaced beloved Blow Gym.

Though somewhat lacking in standout personnel, William and Mary has Bob Sherwood, who led the conference in scoring two seasons ago. A bout of hepatitis shelved him last season.

The Indians hope that some junior college transfers will help.

COACH ED GAZVODA gives team co-captains Steve Silverman and Chuck Duda some advice. The GW wrestling team opens the season Thursday at Catholic University.

Grapplers Begin Campaign Against Catholic Thursday

by Dave Leaf

IN ONLY ITS SECOND year of existence, the GW wrestling team opens the season Thursday evening with a match at Catholic University at 8 pm. The team won only two meets last season, and with the valuable experience gained, acting coach Ed Gazvoda looks forward to a winning season.

The starting lineup is tentative now but most positions are set. The team is strongest in the low weight classes, at 158 lbs; and at heavyweight.

This year's co-captains are watching, especially Steve Silverman. According to Coach Gazvoda, Steve is "the man to watch" in the conference. Chuck Duda, the other co-captain, will wrestle heavyweight again and will provide great strength and a lot of points at that weight.

The squad itself is very young and this could be a team to watch in another year because of its youth. At the weights of 118, 126, and 134 are three strong sophomores, John Ratzko, Jan Sickler, and Wayne Barboro. These three are expected to be very important factors in determining the outcome of the season.

Don Pashayan, Sam Zemsky, Ken Butler, Tom Pinson and Rodolfo Hernandez are also expected to start. Hernandez, a GW soccer player, is wrestling for the first time, and he has shown great strength and a tremendous ability to learn. Pashayan has been singled out by Coach Gazvoda as the "dark horse of the team, who may shine before the season ends."

Others who will see action this year include Brian Porter, Louis Heberer, Dave Harrow, Dave Dobkin, and Roy Chang.

Coach Gazvoda is busy getting the team in condition for the season, drilling the grapplers in a style very similar to that of Vince Lombardi and Red Holzman. Gazvoda has gone back to the beginning, and is intensely drilling his team on the basic maneuvers. He says that they have "made great progress in this area and the team has been working like hell for me."

The team attended a scrimmage between Howard and Catholic, giving the matmen a chance to "see their opponents' strengths and what they would have to do to win." In conditioning, experience, and ability, the team is "way ahead of last year" according to Gazvoda.

The two co-captains, Duda and Silverman, are both looking forward to a fine season. Duda has shed fifty pounds and he has high hopes for a top spot in the conference. Silver was 9-3 last year, with 5 pins to his credit, but this year he hopes to win the conference, it being the Colonials' last season in the conference before going independent.

This year's schedule will be tougher than last season's but the improvement of the team should overshadow the more difficult opponents. After the opening match against Catholic, the team doesn't compete until January 27, when they meet Stevens Trade School for the first home meet.

Some of the GW grapplers will wrestle in the first annual National Capitol Wrestling Championship on Dec. 22 and 23. The tourney will be held at Montgomery College in Maryland.

The schedule is as follows:

Catholic University (away)	Dec. 18 8:00
Stevens Trade School (home)	Jan. 27 7:00
Quadrangle Meet with Citadel, VMI, William & Mary	Jan. 31 7:30

Frostburg (away)	Feb. 3 7:30
Gallaudet (away)	Feb. 11 7:00
Howard University (home)	Feb. 18 8:00
Baltimore University (home)	Feb. 21 2:00
American University (home)	Feb. 27 2:00
Southern Conference (at VMI)	Mar. 3 4:30
	Mar. 6-7

Games Free With I.D.

Athletic Director Bob Faris announced that all GW students can be admitted free to the basketball games against Fordham and Army this weekend with a student I.D. The games begin at 7:00 pm.

Proposals Debated

Portnow disagreed, saying that the convention would cause "a lot of bureaucratic red tape hassles." The number of delegates and the length of the ballot would make the convention "a pain in the neck," he asserted.

Grimm defended his plan for 47 delegates, explaining that, "I want to involve as many faculty members and students as possible."

Public and International Affairs representative Joe Handy defended Grimm's idea saying, "it is our responsibility as an assembly to provide for a definite means of attaining student's goals."

Swartz's proposed Academic Council would consist of one representative from each school, a chairman, a representative to the Center Governing Board, a student Ombudsman and an ex-officio Orientation Director.

Swartz said he wants a "council as far removed from politics as it can be," and claimed that the only political position on the council would be the Academic Chairman.

Academic Committee Chairman Bob Rosenfeld opposed the plan because its changes are too limited, and Vice-President Dave Berz attacked it because of its resemblance to the Student Assembly.

Portnow's suggestion that February's election feature a "slate of candidates running on the platform of abolishing the Student Assembly," will not be included on the referendum. Portnow wants the winning candidates to set up "school councils and come up with their own proposals for the university assembly."

In addition, Portnow discussed the planned Trustee Commission which will consist of four students, four faculty members, four administrators and "special consultants."

According to Portnow, the commission will discuss "problems and proposals and come up with recommendations." He added that the commission already has a chairman and will begin meeting in February. The commission, Portnow said, will render Grimm's constitutional convention "unnecessary."

Several Assembly members pointed out the "ridiculousness" of running for the Student Assembly on a platform to abolish it. Handy said that the elections will depend on "how seriously the students take us."

At this point, College of General Studies representative Bill Owen spoke vehemently in favor of "leaving the Assembly as it now exists for one more election." If only one seventh of the students participate, he said, "the Assembly had better examine why; those interested must make a program to interest the others."

Rosenfeld sharply disagreed with Owen, saying that the present Assembly "has no power to affect anything and does zilch."

Rosenfeld added that the present Assembly "knows the problems of governing and has experienced the futility of being an Assembly." It would be useless, Rosenfeld said, to continue the body on the same basis. He urged adoption of Portnow's proposal.

The Assembly, however, was indecisive about the three alternatives. Grimm's and Swartz's proposals, which were voted on, received only majority votes.

The Assembly voted down a fourth proposal, made by Orientation Director Chuck Kahn, to include on the referendum ballot a proposal to keep future orientation directors from holding seats on the Student Assembly.

The only measure actually brought before the students by Assembly action was George Biondi's proposal to reduce from three to one the number of liaisons between the Assembly and the Center Boards. Biondi claimed that "one representative from the Board is sufficient." That motion passed by a 12-5 vote.

Student Referendum To Decide Assembly's Destiny

by Jon Higman
Hatchet Staff Writer

TWO ALMOST unknown and widely different proposals to completely restructure University government will be voted on at a student referendum tomorrow and Wednesday.

The first, made by at-large representative Jim Swartz, would replace the Student Assembly with an essentially similar Student Academic Council. The second, drafted by Center Governing Board chairman Stanley Grimm, would call an election for a constitutional convention to design new governmental structures.

Though few students knew of the referendum, the Assembly has actually given sufficient warning, since it decided about a month ago to have balloting this week on a proposal to change Assembly elections from February to April.

That proposal will indeed be on the ballot when students go to vote at Woodhull House from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Last week Assemblymen added the two restructuring proposals and an item which would reduce from three to one the number of liaisons between the Center Boards and the Assembly.

Grimm's plan, if adopted, would abolish the present student government and elect a constitutional convention in February instead of a new Student Assembly. There would be 47 delegates at this convention: three students and three faculty members elected from each school and five administrators.

Such a convention would be charged with formulating a governmental structure acceptable to all sections of the University community. Their proposals would, in turn, be submitted to another referendum at which students, faculty and administrators would all vote.

If the convention agrees amicably on a plan, argues Grimm, the broad base of the plan's support would make it easily acceptable to the University as a whole. If it does not, continues an explanatory statement from the Governing Board chairman, "students could still form a separate structure of their own and do it with better ideas as to the goals of student government and of the means to accomplish these goals."

Only student delegates would be chosen in the February elections, since only students would vote.

"Under the referendum," according to Grimm, "students can express a desire to change the structure or maintain the traditional concept of student government by voting the item down; or they can express the latter opinion, abolish student government and call for the formation of a true university senate by voting for the item."

The second proposal, made by at-large representative Jim Swartz, would rewrite sections of the student government's constitution to transform the Student Assembly into a Student Academic Council, a "transitory body" serving as a step in the building of a "true university decision-making body consisting of all major groups of the university."

This council would consist of representatives from each school, with the "upper" and "lower" divisions of Columbian College considered as separate schools, an ex-officio Orientation Director and three members elected a large: an Academic Chairman, a representative to the Center Governing Board and a Student Ombudsman.

To fill the gap by the loss of executive officers, the Council would elect from its membership a Chairman, a Vice-Chairman and a Secretary/Treasurer. At-large members could not hold these posts, but they could join the officers on the executive committee, which would fix Council agendas and act for the Council when full meetings cannot be called.

For the referendum to be valid, at least 700 votes must be cast. Student Assembly President Neil Portnow and Vice-President Dave Berz, reviewing the situation Saturday, doubted whether that goal can be reached. If not, the present Assembly will serve until February, when another election campaign will be held as scheduled.

Portnow and Berz agreed that the referendum will be "ludicrous" because of the scanty publicity but said this was unavoidable because the Assembly began discussing structural changes so late in the fall. Voting cannot be postponed until late in the week, they explained, because by then so many people will have left for home that gathering 700 votes will be inconceivable.

Very little has been done to publicize either the proposals or the referendum itself. Portnow said that "I think it's an awfully big presumption on" the part of Swartz and Grimm "that the student body can be educated on such issues in such a short time."

The following are proposed amendment to the Student Assembly Constitution. After reading each proposal carefully please check the appropriate box.

Question No. 1
That Student Assembly Elections be changed from February to the second Wednesday after Spring Vacation?

Question No. 2
A UNIVERSITY-WIDE
CONSTITUTIONAL CONVENTION

Whereas student government as it presently exists is impotent, and

Whereas a university should be governed by a body composed of students, faculty, and administrators,

Therefore be it proposed that:

1. The abolition of the present structure of the Student Assembly.

2. The cancellation of student government elections until a constitutional convention composed of faculty, students, and administrators can structure and place before a University-wide referendum a true University government structure.

a. The convention shall have the following composition: 1) Three students and three faculty from each school.

a) The students shall be elected by the students of their schools.

b) The faculty members shall be chosen by the faculty members of their schools or appointed by the Dean.

2) The administrative representatives shall include:

a) The President of the University
b) The Vice President for Student Affairs
c) The Associate Dean of Students
d) The Student Activities Coordinator
e) The University Provost

b) The election shall be conducted by the Joint Committee of the Student Assembly and the Faculty Senate, or if that body does not exist, by the Committee on Student Life. The elections shall be held no later than March 1, 1970. (explanatory note: By "student government elections" in No. 2, the referendum refers to only Student Assembly elections and NOT to elections of the University Center government.)

Question No. 3

Add a Preamble: We the students of George Washington University, recognize the importance of building a true university decision making body consisting of all major groups of the university, and organize this Student Academic Council as a transitory body toward that goal; Add 1. Article 1: substitute name Student Academic Council for Student Assembly. Add 2. Article 11 Section D the major function of the Student Academic Council shall be to foster academic reform and student participation in the decision making process. 3. Delete Article IV and substitute:

The Student Academic Council shall consist of the following members:

One representative from each school. (lower and upper Columbian shall be considered two schools in this instance.)

2. One at-large Academic chairman

3. One at-large representative to the University Center Governing Board.

4. One at-large Student Ombudsman.

5. Orientation Director-ex officio
